

Hooking Our Students with Style

A good hook for a lesson can favor any one of the four learning styles.

Teacher Preparation:

Use the chart below to create lesson hooks in the different learning styles. Rotate styles to address the different needs of your students. As students are repeatedly asked to think in different styles, they become more comfortable in using all of them.

Mastery Hooks Ask students to recall what they already know.	Interpersonal Hooks Ask students to use their own feelings and experiences to connect to and process new information.
Understanding Hooks Ask students to examine data and expand prior knowledge.	Self-Expressive Hooks Ask students to use metaphors or “What If?” inquiries to harness the imagination in deep processing of content.

© Thoughtful Education Press, 2008

Adapted from The Thoughtful Classroom: Making Students as Important as Standards, The New American Lecture presented by Dr. Daniel Moirao, Ed. D., at Fuquay-Varina High School, Wake County Public School System, on March 6, 2008.